

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

2014 Professional Photographers of Canada - British Columbia
Annual Provincial Image Competition

September 28th, 2014
Vancouver, British Columbia

At the Annual Awards Banquet of the Professional Photographers of Canada - British Columbia (PPOC-BC), held at the Roundhouse in Vancouver, British Columbia,

Andrew Latreille, a professional photographer from Vancouver, BC, had 1 image accepted and exhibited in the Provincial Image Salon, that was judged by a panel of master photographers from across the province. Acceptance into the salon is an indication of the makers' ability to produce outstanding images for their clientele. It also earns the maker merits toward several designations offered to PPOC-BC members, including the prestigious PPOC-BC Fellowship designation.

The competition features entries from across the province in twenty different classes, including press, portrait, architecture and fashion.

Kent Wong, Chair of the National Exhibition Committee, said: "We were thrilled to see so many inspiring entries in the competition this year. The salon images clearly demonstrate the exceptional skill and quality that professionals bring to the medium of photography."

The Professional Photographers of Canada is a diversified group of creative artists dedicated to the highest standards in professional imaging. It seeks to qualify and support photographers to become industry leaders. It was formed by commercial and press photographers in Ontario in 1946 as the Commercial and Press Photographers Association of Canada (CAPPAC) and was renamed the Professional Photographers of Canada Inc (PPOC) in 1962 to reflect its nationwide membership.
